

Princess Diana Beach

Tour Guide · Barbuda, Antigua & Barbuda

About the Beach

Princess Diana Beach (also known as Access Beach or Coco Point Beach) is a long stretch of soft white-to-pink sand on the southern coast of Barbuda, in Antigua and Barbuda. It is named after Princess Diana, who visited the beach several times.

The beach is known for its calm, clear water on the western side, fine sand that sometimes has a pink tint, and a very quiet, undeveloped atmosphere. It is often ranked among the world's best beaches because of its natural, almost empty feel.

Quick Facts

Location	South Barbuda, near Coco Point (Antigua & Barbuda)
Length	About 1.5–3 km of beach
Sand	Soft white sand, sometimes pink-tinged
Water	Calm and clear on the western side
Facilities	Very limited – mostly undeveloped
Atmosphere	Quiet, remote, low crowds

Best Time to Visit

Barbuda has a warm tropical climate year-round. The drier and more pleasant months are generally December to April. Summer and early autumn can be hotter and more humid, with a higher chance of rain and storms.

How to Get There

Princess Diana Beach is on the island of Barbuda, which is separate from Antigua. You need to reach Barbuda first.

1. Getting to Barbuda

- By ferry: Passenger ferry from St. John's, Antigua to Codrington (Barbuda). Journey about 90 minutes. Check current schedules.
- By air: Short flight (around 20 minutes) from Antigua to Barbuda Codrington Airport.

2. From Codrington to the Beach

- The beach is about 7 km (roughly 15–20 minutes) south of Codrington.
- Take a local taxi or arranged driver (most common option).
- Limited car rentals are available; roads can be bumpy.
- Some visitors arrive by private boat or yacht.

What to Do

- Swim in the calm, clear water
- Walk or relax on the long stretch of soft sand
- Snorkel near the shore (bring your own gear)
- Enjoy the quiet, undeveloped setting
- Take photos of the pink-tinged sand and turquoise water

What to Bring

- Plenty of water and snacks (very few services on the beach)
- Sunscreen, hat, and sunglasses
- Beach towel and swimwear
- Snorkel gear if you want to explore the water
- Cash for taxis or any local vendors
- Bag for rubbish — leave no trace

Facilities

The beach is largely undeveloped. There are few or no permanent facilities such as restaurants, showers, or lifeguards. Some local vendors may appear seasonally (for example offering drinks or lobster lunch if pre-arranged). Plan to be self-sufficient.

Useful Tips

1. Arrange transport in advance — taxis from Codrington are the usual way to reach the beach.
2. Bring everything you need for the day (food, water, shade if possible).
3. The beach is quiet and remote — this is part of its appeal.
4. Check ferry or flight schedules carefully when planning a day trip from Antigua.
5. Respect the natural environment and take all rubbish away with you.
6. The western side of the point usually has calmer water for swimming.
